Problems during Sprint Meetings

Our group had issues with communication for the duration of this sprint, as well as considerable outside factors causing us to be unable to even meet up, let alone work.

The top factor that caused us to have issues is both Adam and Isaac really do not understand the processes behind these Sprint meetings. It may even be an ego trip – admitting that you are having troubles contributing to a project is a difficult thing for us to do. Hoang is considerably skilled at program development and managing the project but due to a lack of communication between us all we really weren't able to contribute anything directly.

Figure 1 shows our total progress made by the end of Sprint 1. We made a small amount of progress but many features are still quite lacking and still need to be implemented.

We have discussed methods to rectify this. We have guaranteed a time to meet up every night without exception – 9:30pm on Skype. Adam is to record the meeting minutes and screen capture the Burndown and Trello charts.

Finally, we have to learn to communicate better, talk about any problems we may have in the future as well as learn to ask for help if we need assistance. Overall, our progress was not up to standard in this sprint. We will need to 'step it up' in the next Sprint and aim to deliver considerably better results by its conclusion.
